BetaShares Agriculture ETF - Currency Hedged (synthetic)

Invest in a portfolio of the most significant agricultural commodities in a single trade

The BetaShares Agriculture ETF – Currency Hedged (synthetic) (ASX: QAG) is a convenient way to gain exposure to the four most globally significant agricultural commodities.

DIVERSIFIED EXPOSURE TO AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

Provides exposure to the four most significant agricultural commodities (corn, soybeans, sugar and wheat) in one trade. QAG obtains its investment exposure by investing in commodities futures (meaning performance may differ from the spot price).

PORTFOLIO DIVERSIFICATION

The agriculture sector historically has shown a low correlation to equities, fixed income and other major asset classes.

GROWING DEMAND

As populations grow and become more affluent, so does the demand for the commodities QAG provides exposure to.

CONVENIENCE

Buy and sell on the ASX, avoiding the costs and complications of trading directly in physical commodities or futures markets.

Diversify exposure to agricultural commodities

DEMOGRAPHIC TRENDS AND THE DEMAND FOR AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

The demand for agricultural products is supported not just by rising populations – more mouths to feed – but also by increasing living standards.

The composition of food demand changes, as increased demand for protein rich diets (meat and dairy) means more grain is required to feed livestock.

Investment risks include market risk, commodity volatility risk, commodity futures roll risk, counterparty risk and derivatives risk. For more information on risks and other features of the Fund, please see the Product Disclosure Statement.
